The Daily Gazetteer.

NUMB. 1883

FRIDAY, AUGUST 7. 1741.

AM exceedingly obliged to ſeveral of my Correſpondents for their Aſſiſtance on many Occaſions, tho' I did not think it expedient to fill this Paper with their Favours, and ſuch Characters of my Eſſays, as ſuit rather with their kind Concern for the Author, than with the ſlender Merit of his Perſons. Had I publiſh'd ſuch Pieces, they would have only to increaſe the Spleen of my Antagoniſts, who threaten'd with continuing their Abuſe on me, would perhaps have attack'd innocent Perſons, meerly from having ſometimes a good Opinion of a Gazetteer. The following Epiſtles however not being at all liable to that Exception (as I could wiſh none of the Letters I receive were) I with a great deal of Satisfaction give to the Publick, as deſiring to do ſtrict Juſtice to thoſe who do me the Honour to ſend their Lucubrations under my Hands. We are now in a kind of Vacation for Politicks, and if any Man, let his Political Sentiments be what they will, furniſhes me with a Humour-ous or Moral Diſcourſe, I ſhall receive it as a Favour, and publiſh it as ſpeedily as may be to the Publick. With me, whoever endeavours to inſtruct, inform, or divert the Town, deſerves well of his Country, becauſe that Diverſion as Good Senſe and Politeneſs ſpread thro' the Iſle, the greater Figure they make abroad, and the better Subjects they make at Home. Obſtinacy and Rancour are naturally produced by Ruſticity and Want of Taſte, ſo that to poliſh Men's Minds is to render the higheſt Service to a virtuous Adminiſtration.

R. FREEMAN.

RALPH FREEMAN, Eſq;

Sir,

That theſe Malecontents are a merry People; they are angry at an Inſinuation after a Paragraph of News, that we are Patriots too among the French. Why ſo, Sir, theſe Folks are but bad Chriſtians tho' good Republicaniſmen; otherwiſe they would rejoice at their Neighbours Proſperity. If Patriots here are good Men (I doubt my very if is criminal) however, if Patriots ſay, are good Men here, then to be ſure they muſt think well of their Gallick Brethren; ay, and muſt ſay well to them in all their Schemes againſt the Son of Peace —— at Rome, whoſe View is Peace, the Intereſt of all true Patriots Averſion. They ought to write to them 'Squire D'Anvers, Dr. Common Senſe, and Mr. Vinegar, as their Plenipotentiary, with Inſtructions how to ſow Sedition, propagate Diſaffection, and extirpate Loyalty; but alas! theſe are but Dreams, for Malecontents (even tho' they can well ſpare ſuch an Head) will never be prevail'd on to take this Step, for fear it might —— prove ſerviceable to the Adminiſtration.

To be ſure, the Author of the Letter they quarrel with was a True Patriot; a Patriot in France, a Patriot in the ſtricteſt Senſe of the Word. He thinks that one ſhould not be fond of mounting a Stage again, becauſe the Wounds they got at the laſt Prize-fighting are not fully healed. He fanſied too that in War and at Sea Money is almoſt as neceſſary as Juſtice, and had ſtrange Whims about hazarding Certainties (and of no Conſequence too) for the Sake of nothing that is fairly talk'd of, ſave the Honour of alarming People. This, I fanſy, might have an ill Effect upon Manufactors. What Buſineſs, ſay they, has this Fellow to talk of ſuch unlucky Truths, and then ſcribble to 'em on this Side the Water? Every body who recollects, knows that he's right; but what then? Heretofore we uſed to bring about a French War, but now 'tis thought beſt, we ſay one and all —— 'tis inexpedient. We don't like Mouth's Mind to ſtartle the People with a Proſpect of French Puiſſance, and this Votary to Truth, forſooth, muſt fall on the Head. May he ſee the Inſide of the Tower for it!

As to this, his wicked Suggeſtion, that Spain is at low Ebb, and we ſee good Reaſon for the Patriots publiſhing ſuch a Piece of Intelligence. To ſay the Truth, ever ſince the War began, they have commiſſioned their Scribes to ſerve his Catholick Majeſty as Hiſtoriographers. HOMER took leſs Pains about his Heroes than they in ſetting out the Feats of Spaniſh Privateers. From a ſlow, inactive, lazy People, they in a Moment became ſo indefatigable as warlike. Their Fleets were fitted out with Expedition, their Troops were Veterans who were ſent abroad, our Colonies were on the Point of being deſtroy'd; and as for our Trade, that was transferr'd to St. Sebaſtian's. Such were the Triumphs of Spain in the Champion, while under the Head of taken by the Engliſh, he Weekly inſerted NONE. And after all this are the Spaniards undone? Impudent, impertinent Raſcal, to publiſh this ſo mal a propos, when theſe People cannot diſprove it. Alas! it ſhews plainly that Things ſtand oddly here as well as abroad; there is the Venom of the Letter. Sometime or other, I ſuppoſe, one of your Correſpondents will collect theſe Paſſages from the Patriot Papers, and ſhew when the Spaniards became the King's Enemies, they became their Heroes.

I am, &c.

BARNABY FLUNT.

King's-Yard, Deptford, Auguſt 5, 1741.

To RALPH FREEMAN, Eſq;

SIR,

THAT Readineſs which you have always ſhewn, in obliging ſuch of your Friends as endeavoured to aſſiſt you in the great Task you have undertaken, inclined me to venture upon ſending you the incloſed. I know very well that I am no great Poet, but I know likewiſe your Adverſaries have but one on their Side, and he too is now grown honeſt, or at leaſt prudent enough to be ſilent, ſo that I fear no Reply. If you think, therefore, my Verſes worthy of the Publick View, print them; the Truth they contain will, with candid Criticks, atone for any Negligence in Numbers.

I am,

Your conſtant Reader, and very humble Servant,

CHRISTOPHER CRAMBO.

Richmond-Green, Auguſt 5.

A COPY of VERSES occaſion'd by comparing a Great Man to the MOON.

I Smoak'd, Dear Sir, his Error ſoon,
Who Fabius liken'd to the Moon.
Tho' I confeſs He's brighter far,
Than any other modern Star.
But ſtill the Moon he's quite unlike.
How could his Brain this Notion ſtrike?
Sure 'twas the Planet had a mind
This odd Similitude to find.
It was, and thus I make it p'ain,
It touch'd therewith the Poet's Brain,
Or never had the Bard I ween
In Oppoſites ſuch Likeneſs ſeen.
The Moon, ſo mighty prone to change;
The Moon, who borrows Light; —— O ſtrange!
The Moon, which only Madfolks guides,
(And ſo o'er Malecontents preſides)
Like Fabius! —— how do they agree?
Conſtant and ſteady him we ſee,
Shining with real Worth,— and known
To have the Good and Great his own:
Becauſe his Views are underſtood
Always to be —— both great and good.
Correct, my Friend, ſay you. —— 'Tis done.
Fabius reſembles moſt the SUN.
His Beams exhilerate this Ball,
And Fabius' Virtues warm us all.
The Sun too raiſes Clouds, which ſwim
'Twixt us and ſeem to darken him.
So Fabius' Merit Envy draws;
His Light, of Party Shade the Cauſe;
Which e'en in it ſome Worth creates,
Enobled,-- as on Him-- it waits.
And as the Sun is ſaid to breed
The Inſects, which Corruption feed;
So from the Plenty Fabius wrought
A buzzing Crew of Waſps are brought,
Who, rich themſelves, bewail the Poor,
But ne'er relieve them from their Store;
Exclaim at Wrongs themſelves would do;
Deſpiſe the Poſts for which they ſue;
Deeds they want Souls to act impeach;
And hate that Worth they cannot reach.

To 'Squire Freeman.

You Silly Dog!

THO' I hate you as much as I do your Maſter; tho' I abhor your Principles, and deſpiſe your Writings; yet, as I have ſome Good-nature left, I pity you. Do you mark that, Freeman? I pity you. And therefore, to ſave you a deal of unneceſſary Scribbling, a Word in your Ear. —— We are reſolv'd not to underſtand you, tho' you ſhou'd write ever ſo plain. —— Remember that, and ſtick the Pen behind your Cap, Old Boy.

To be ſure you're a ſad Dunce, or you would not have wanted this Caution. Don't you ſee, that tho' you modeſtly hinted our Intemperance might hurt the Preſs, and ſhew'd a grievous Concern for it, yet we turn'd the thing quite another Way, charging you with evil Intentions towards the Liberty of the Subject, and valuing ourſelves on being its Defenders.— Away with Argument, good 'Squire; our Weapon's ASSURANCE.

My Couſin, Capt. Vinegar, is a little indolent at preſent; but towards Winter, when the Company comes to Town and he has ſomething in View, depend on't he'll ſwinge you; rap you o'er the Knuckles, which may diſable you from Writing or Thrumming on your Organ; or perhaps he'll write another Epiſtle to a quondam Great Man in Praiſe of Steadineſs, and lay you on ſtoutly in it,— for 'twill pleaſe his Patron. In the mean time Lilbourne ſhall buffet you; — he ſhall rail, and ſnarl, and carp, and criticize, and quote Shakeſpeare and all that, and defy you, as indeed he may do all Mankind, to anſwer him. —— So, d'ye hear, deſiſt in time, or we'll break your Heart.

Moreover let me tell you, my Friend Holdright will have t'other Pluck at you. But you need not ſo much fear him, becauſe he has more Manners than the reſt of us: He is for Reaſoning, forſooth; a thing I hate; 'tis your Patron's Talent; he can corrupt a whole Houſe by it. For my part, Raillery's my Argument, I learn'd it at Tom King's, exerciſe it every Morning at the Coffee-houſe, and continue in the full Diſplay of my Faculty till Midnight; if before then I am not paſt ſpeaking — Beware then, Mercenary, I don't exert it at your Expence.

To be free with you, tho' I talk as faſt as any body, yet I hate Writing,— becauſe it obliges one to be ſober. For Peace ſake then let alone the PRESS, that I mayn't be halloo'd upon you. Don't you know 'tis our Palladium, or rather our Palm tree, ſince we extract Meat, Drink and Cloth from it. —— Be civil then, be civil.— The beſt-diſciplin'd Soldiers will mutiny if you touch their Subſiſtance, what then can you expect from Marauders? Conſider the Danger. —— Let the PRESS alone, — and perhaps I'll drop ſomewhat in Praiſe of your Moral Papers.

Adieu!

From our old Quarters, Hockley-i'-th'-Hole.

Your's, as you're wiſe, SIMON SNAPSHORT.

LONDON, Auguſt 8.

Yeſterday arriv'd a Mail from Flanders, with Advice, Vienna, That General Neuperg has Orders to march to ſuch a certain Diſtance from the Enemy, there to act as Things ſhall occur, and to govern himſelf by the Hanover Troops, which have Orders to join him; and that the Saxons are equally in Motion; ſo that the Pruſſian Army will probably be beſieged in their Camp, and have their Proviſions cut off.

From Berlin, that their long Hopes of a Peace are quite vaniſh'd, ſince they heard by the laſt Letters from Sileſia that the Queen of Hungary's Army is paſs'd the Neiſs and advancing towards that of Pruſſia.

By the Snow juſt arrived from Nova Colonia, there is Advice, that Admiral Pizarro was return'd to Buenos Ayres with two large Ships, one of which had loſt a Maſt, the reſt of the Squadron being diſperſed. It is alſo ſaid, that the Negroes had roſe in the Neighbourhood of Buenos Ayres and cut off ſeveral Parties of Spaniards, and that fatal Conſequences were apprehended from thence.

Laſt Week the Aſſizes ended at Ely, before Charles Clarke, Eſq; Chief Juſtice of that Iſle, when one Man receiv'd Sentence of Death for Sheep-ſtealing.

On Wedneſday laſt two Soldiers belonging to the Foot-guards and a Horſe Grenadier were committed to the Savoy, for ſtealing ſeventeen Fowls out of the Houſe of Mr. Slack in Scotland-yard, a Side Drum belonging to the Earl of Effingham's Troop of Horſe guards.

At the Aſſizes at Durham, Matthew Richardſon, for ſtealing ſeveral Pair of Shoes, the Property of William Ridſdale; Robert Anderſon, for Sheep-ſtealing; Robert Blackett, for feloniouſly ſtealing out of the Pocket of Henry Batſon three Guineas in Gold; and Thomas Whitehead, for picking the Pocket of Mr. George Johnſon, and feloniouſly taking thereout a Gold Watch, with a Gold Chain, the Value of 26 l. 10 s. received Sentence of Death. John Watt, for riotouſly aſſembling, with many others, and breaking open a Granary at North Blyth, and feloniouſly taking and carrying away from thence a Quantity of Corn, the Property of John Lambert Middleton, Eſq; to be tranſported for even Years.

We hear that Mr. James Leeton, one of the Cryers of the Court of Common Pleas, is appointed Court-Keeper of the ſaid Court, in the room of Mr. John Goudge, deceaſed.

On Wedneſday laſt a Preſentation paſs'd the Great Seal to the Rev. Mr. John Brooke, of the Rectory of Upton Parva, alias Waters Uxton, in the County of Salop and Dioceſe of Litchfield and Coventry.

On Tueſday next the Lords Commiſſioners and others for managing the Affairs of Chelſea College, will ſit at Killigrew-court, Scotland-yard, to examine ſuch ſuper-annuated Invalids as are worn out in the Service of the Crown, in order to admit them into the Penſion of the ſaid College.
